

Rural Crime: Serious, Organised and International

Who Victimises Rural Communities?

Report prepared by

Dr. Kate Tudor

Why was this research needed?

The presence of criminal activities in our rural areas have been evident, and have been on a constant rise, negatively impacting the businesses and the residents of the countryside. This has left our rural communities feeling isolated and inadequately protected.

Uncovering and highlighting the complex, organised nature of rural crime is the first step in safeguarding these communities.

Here is what the data says:

01

Expenses pertaining to rural crime grew by 22% in the year 2022.

Organised crime often involves multi-generational criminal families, having a long-term commitment to rural offending.

02

03

The diversity of criminal involvement makes it evident that rural criminals operate in multiple forms.

43% of those surveyed, reported that they had been victims of crime in the last 12 months.

04

How Organised is Rural Crime?

The data collected in the research demonstrates that a significant portion of rural crime constitutes organised criminality.

22 currently active OCGs were involved throughout the time this research was conducted.

Key Factors

Series of offending

Presence of multiple offenders

Hierarchical structure and planning

Cross-border reach

There is strong evidence that rural crime in the UK is an intricate and a highly complex problem.

It is not yet met with a response that it truly needs.
